This is an excellent book for girls of any age! Filled with scripture and godly wisdom, humor, and real-life examples, this book is one of my daughter's favorites! We have had some great discussions in our home after reading each devotional! I love seeing my daughter grabbing for her Bible and this book so diligently each morning.

This is a perfect started devotional for young girls. It is interactive and fun without losing the truth of God and living for Him. The devotions are age appropriate and relateable to it's target audience yet it is not dumbed-down or immature. It allows our tween girls to actively interact with the word of God. As a bonus it teaches journaling, having a quiet time or devotional time, seeking God in prayer and in His Word all as a happy off shoot of going through this devotional. The activities and reflections at the end of each chapter challenge the girls to go deeper which is a blessing and wonderful tool to have as they grow into beautiful women of God. I received this free for my honest opinion from NetGalley and Harvest House Publisher

Absolutely LOVE this devotional for my little 7yo. She understands most of what is written. Sometimes I need to alter a few words for her to understand but it's no big deal. Both she and I have learned alot. Sometimes the devo will make me feel convicted of certain things I am doing. I highly recommend this study. Sure has helped my daughters attitude alot.

This sweet devotional for tween girls is very conversational in tone, almost as if a girl's teen big sister is having a brief heart-to-heart with her. The book is cheerful, even chipper at times, without being annoying. It is engaging in that the speaker asks reflexive questions, drawing in the reader, as well as inviting the reader to contemplate application and journal some thoughts. It is challenging in that it actually prompts the reader to be doers of the Word and not just hearers only, mgiving suggestions for practical action. My tween loved reading it, and it prompted some great discussions. My girl also liked that it included suggested prayers with each devo. I liked that it was gently teaching the reader to pray God's Word over her life, asking at every turn for God's help to be obedient to what she is learning. My only dislike is that as a parent, I would have appreciated a table of contents or index of topics. I always preview books before giving them to my children, and having a TOC and/or index would have helped me come to a decision more quickly. I received a free ARC in exchange for my unbiased opinion.

What I enjoyed about the devotional was that it was easy for my daughter to not only read, but relate to. The devotions are short and simple and are written in a style that feels as if a young tween is speaking. My daughter really enjoyed that, she said it felt as if she were doing the devotion with a friend. Another feature of the devotional that I like is the section at the end of each day. This is where the writer asks the reader to do something - write out the title of God's story for their life, answer a few questions, or take a quiz. Even some of the devotions have active participation, like the day where the reader needs to guess, "What fruit am I?" My daughter wasn't just reading, she was searching through her Bible, thinking about what was being said, and applying it to her own life through these thought provoking questions, games, and activities!! I received a free copy of this book in exchange for a fair and honest review.
